Prizes Presented to Calf Club Winners at Lunch

The boys and girls who were winners in the calf club competition sponsored by the Wetaskiwin Kiwanis Club were guests of the club at the weekly luncheon on Tuesday evening, and they were given their prizes. Dr. Marker, dairy commissioner, and Mr. S. G. Carlyle, live stock commissioner, were the speakers and in addition to the boys and girls, many of the parents sat around the banquet table.

Dr. Marker referred to being in Wetaskiwin in 1897 and that year 2669 inches of cream was handled by the creamery. Last year the creameries in Wetaskiwin made about 500,000 lbs. of butter. In the year 1894, Champlain brought cows into Quebec and Rev. John McDougall brought cows to year Edmonton and started the dairy industry; a cheese factory was started at Oshawa, Ont.; a cream separator was invented by a German, and a Frenchman discovered bacteria. Today pasteurization enables dealers to ship butter to the British market, keeping it in fine condition.

Mr. Carlyle spoke of the outstanding work done by Mr. Marker by starting the grading system in Alberta, which has put the butter of this province in the first rank. He then proceeded to give the boys and girls some excellent advice and urged them to aim at nothing less than the highest quality in live stock, grains and dairy products. As a result of being members of the calf clubs the boys and girls are made better citizens. Dairying has a high place in Alberta because it has the highest quality and brings the best price. Growing good wheat has decreased the live stock industry, but the speaker advised the farmers to get back to live stock and they must grow the best to compete in the world's markets. We can compete in bacon hogs because we have cheaper feed of the right kind as well as the climate. He advised the boys and girls to improve the quality of hogs, as the million hogs marketed in Canada last year was not the quality to capture the British market. He also advised feeding hogs and cattle scientifically.

After a guitar selection by Dr. DeLong, Mr. Carlyle handed out the prizes to the winners, as follows: Beef Section—1 Melvin Ballhorn, 2 Roma Ballhorn, 3 Gordon Ballhorn, 4 Ira Shantz, 5 Hilda Ensminger, 6 Otto Dewald, 7 Roscoe Grant, 8 Wilfred Shantz, 9 Dave Armstrong, 10 Ralph Erickson, 11 Vernon Grant, 12 Alfred Zielke.

Dairy Section—1 Lloyd Pickard, 2 Gordon Rix, 3 Clarence Rix, 4 Ira Shantz, 5 Norman Rix, 6 Ernest Steller, 7 Esther Steller, 8 Harold Hoyle, 9 Geo. Churchill, 10 Doris Pickard, 11 Harry Zielke.

The club is deeply indebted to Mr. Carlyle, Mr. Black, Dr. Marker and other members of the Department of Agriculture for the co-operation and assistance rendered in connection with the work of the clubs in this community.

DEPARTING CITIZEN HONORED
Tuesday afternoon of last week the members of the W.A. of Immanuel Church tendered a farewell tea in honor of Mrs. B. M. Parker at the home of Mrs. F. B. Parker. A very enjoyable time was spent and the guest of honor was presented with a slight token of appreciation of the faithful service she has rendered the auxiliary during the many years she has been a member.

The members of Peace Hill Chapter I.O.E.F. met at the home of Mrs. J. S. Orr last Wednesday afternoon to bid goodbye to a member, Mrs. B. M. Parker, who left on Sunday to reside in Vancouver. An hour was spent on intelligence contests, which always provide good amusement. Mrs. Freeman proved herself the most intelligent lady this time, and carried home the prize, a pretty piece of china. Another hour was spent over the teasups, the Regent, Mrs. Burkholder, pouring from a very attractively arranged table. Mrs. Parker was presented with a small gift, a token of esteem from the Chapter.

Cancer claimed 528 lives in Alberta during 1932, according to the Alberta Medical association cancer report issued Thursday. A total of 542 cases were reported to the association during the year.

Obituary

MRS. CLOVSTAD
Dorothea Clovstad was born in Ulenasor, Norway, May 21, 1856. At the age of 40 years she emigrated to Hayward, Wisconsin, where she was married to William Clovstad in 1897. They were occupied with farming near Hayward until 1919, when they moved to Los Angeles, Calif., for the benefit of their husband's health.

In 1926 her husband became seriously ill, and they went to Chicago, where after an operation, Mr. Clovstad passed away. Two years later Mrs. Clovstad came to Canada, where she resided with her relatives Mrs. P. Kvien and Mrs. T. T. Jevne.

On Friday morning, October 13th, she passed away at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. Kvien, after an illness of five years, and was at the time of her death, 77 years, 4 months and 22 days.

She was the youngest of a family of nine, of whom three survive her, one brother in Chicago, and a brother and sister in Norway. She also leaves to mourn her loss a host of relatives and friends in Canada, the U.S.A. and also in Norway.

Funeral services were conducted in the Wang Lutheran church on Oct. 15 by Rev. Prygstad of Camrose. There were given two selections by the Wang choir, and a solo by Rev. Prygstad. The services were closed by singing the favorite hymn of the deceased. There were floral tributes in the form of a wreath from the choir and a wreath from Mr. and Mrs. T. Jevne and family and Mr. and Mrs. P. Kvien, and a memorial contribution from Wang Ladies' Aid and the Young People's League.

The pallbearers were Messrs. T. T. Jevne, Paul Kvien, T. B. Jevne, Carl O. Jevne, Lars Leroli and A. Jevne.

The remains, which will be interred in Chicago by the side of her late husband, left Wetaskiwin on Sunday night, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. P. Kvien and Mr. and Mrs. T. Jevne and daughter Milly.

SWINE BREEDERS' FIELD DAY
The Swine Breeders' Field Day of the Dominion, Experimental Station, Lacombe, Monday, October 30th, should be of interest and profit to every farmer. During the last five years no branch of farming has brought better returns than hog raising. With the new preference on the British market the next five years should show much higher profits if we have the right type of hogs.

At this Swine Field Day the proper type of select bacon hogs will be demonstrated alive and in Villarsides, as compared with the butcher shop hog, which costs more to raise and is worth at least $2.00 less per hog.

Dr. R. D. Sinclair, University of Alberta, Edmonton, will give a talk and demonstration on the type required in select bacon hogs, combined with good feeding qualities.

H. E. Wilson, Experimental Station, Lacombe, will give an outline of the breeding and feeding experiments under way at the Experimental Station.

F. M. Baker of the Industrial and Development Council of Canadian Meat Packers, will give a demonstration on the different types of dressed hogs as they appear on the rail.

G. G. Freeborn, Dominion Live Stock Branch, will discuss the different policies for Government assistance to farmers in raising hogs.

S. G. Carlyle, Live Stock Commissioner for Alberta, will discuss the place of the hog in Alberta farming.

MILLIONS OF GRASS—HOPPER EGGS
A farmer in the Drumheller vicinity stepped into The Mail office on Tuesday and pleaded for an inch of space in this newspaper to warn other farmers that there are millions of grasshopper eggs laid in the district. He proved it by pouring out of a large envelope a handful of earth literally peppered with eggs of the pest.

This farmer stated that he had found these on a piece of poorly worked land and scooped them up from an area of four square inches—Drumheller Mail.

It's Right Beneath Our Feet

Premier R. B. Bennett Advocates Fifteen Per Cent. Reduction in Wheat Production

Edmonton, Oct. 12.—Emphasizing the fact that the Dominion government had spent $122,552,000 on relief since August 1, 1930, and that he realized the procedure in dealing with the unemployment problem must be cautious with a moderate wage program, R. B. Bennett, P.C., K.C., premier of Canada, in addressing a mass meeting at McDougall auditorium on Thursday night, gave a resume of highlights of his stewardship as head of the government since taking office in 1930.

Among the points most strongly stressed in Mr. Bennett's address were:

1. The depression was largely a result of the World War.
2. The wheat agreement signed at the World Economic Conference was the first world effort to co-ordinate production to demand.
3. Wheat was still King and until the primary producer received a profit from it, there would be no return to prosperity.
4. Canada had voted for establishment of a central bank in "developed" countries, of which this country is one.
5. Equilibrium of trade is being restored through the agreement signed at the Imperial Economic Conference of 1932.

Premier Bennett recalled that when last he appeared before an Edmonton audience and appealed for support at the polls during the general election of 1930 neither he nor anyone else realized the fact that the world stood "on the brink of the greatest catastrophe in history."

But only a short time elapsed before all realized that not only one or two countries were involved, but that the whole world was plunged into a depression and in 1933 unemployment had attained such an extent that 30,000,000 persons were thrown out of gainful employment and 100,000,000 were affected by the economic situation.

"World trade had almost disappeared," he said, "and international trade had shrunk, not by one third, but by two-thirds, to one-third of what it had been. It affected all countries, rich and poor and even the rich and powerful United States had experienced the depression on such a scale that 'we one high U.S. official told me, at one time, there were 17,000,000 unemployed there.' These conditions had grown from small beginnings.

Continuing, he contended that "in the last analysis the depression owed its beginning to the World War. For four years men were engaged in destruction. So much went up in noise, shot and shell and destructive means that when the period of reconstruction came, there was a condition, beggarly description. 'Then came the tariff—an emergency tariff—to enable Canadians to weather the economic storm.

"As a result of what we did, you will find that for the 12 months ended in August of this year, the Dominion sold $114,000,000 more in goods than were bought, thus restoring the equilibrium of trade."

It was a matter of pride, he said, that Canada had maintained the integrity of its banks, meeting all obligations or renewing them to the satisfaction of debtors.

"In the United States 4000 banks closed their doors. No Canadian bank closed its doors. No Canadian depositor who drew a cheque on a Canadian bank failed to obtain payment. With our banks and institutions intact we have emerged from a great crisis with the admiration of the world," he said.

Canada had not repudiated its indebtedness and as a mark of confidence, United States had no less than $4,000,000,000 invested in the Dominion.

The recent English loan of £15,000,000 was another mark of confidence. Fully 22,000 English people sought to obtain the 4% securities at the par and the books for the loan, opened at 9 a.m., were closed one minute later. Canada maintained its credit throughout the crisis, even at the price of sacrifice.

Canada, being the only country engaged in the world war without external debts, had been the only loser when Germany's reparations were cancelled last year.

Premier Bennett next directed his attention to the recent World Economic Conference at London. It had been termed a failure by some, but he did not subscribe to this.

Agreement had been reached on the 25 per cent metal coverage on money issued. It was also agreed that gold should be the international yardstick for measuring finances.

A unanimous resolution had been passed favoring a central bank in all developed countries.

In voting for the bank, Canada had gone on record as favoring the same. This brought about the Royal Commission on banking and finance.

Stabilized exchanges within the Empire was another aim of the conference, although it was difficult in Canada's case, owing in dollars and being paid for by exports in sterling. There was hope that this difficulty might be overcome in the near future.

The wheat situation was next taken up.

Since the war many countries had increased production. Prices had fallen to practically nothing, but production continued until prices had fallen far below production costs.

Canada had been the principal offender in the world wheat carry-over.

Before the war there were 10,000,000 acres sown to wheat each year. Last year there were 27,000,000 acres. A total of 35 per cent of Canada's export wheat was sold in Europe and the other 15 per cent scattered over the world, including the Orient.

Five years before the war, exports in wheat to importing countries, totaled 667,000,000 bushels a year, of which Canada supplied 14 per cent. In the 10-year period 1920-1930 importing countries bought 762,000,000 bushels a year, of which Canada supplied 35 and 6-10 per cent.

On August 1, 1930, there was a total of 130,000,000 bushels of surplus wheat in Canada and in August of this year there was a total of 212,000,000 bushels.

Europe was using only slightly more wheat than 10 years ago and was importing less. The Great War had frightened Europe into thinking what might happen if wheat supply if there was a submarine or other blockade. France, Italy, Germany and Spain were now producing about as much wheat as Canada and the Danubian countries producing more than they had ever done.

"With wheat prices as low as they are, what would you, as business men and women do?" he asked. "The answer is to restrict or lessen the quantity you grow, until you sell your surplus and get the price back to a normal level."

"This year importing countries total wheat requirements are 560,000,000 bushels. The prosperity of the world depends on the price of wheat and only when the primary producer makes a profit will permanent prosperity return."

"If the husbandman is to get profit, he must reduce production on an average of 15 per cent and the surplus will disappear and will then return to the old law of supply and demand. With the rise of wheat prices better times will come and will be delayed until the price does rise."

Weddings

FIVELAND—BRIDGE
A pretty but quiet wedding was solemnized on Saturday, Oct. 14th, at 11 a.m. at the Baptist parsonage, when Miss Enid Bridge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Bridge of Westeros was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Carl N. Fiveland, son of Mrs. H. Fiveland of Westeros and the late Mr. Fiveland. Rev. P. M. Meyer officiated.

The bride looked pretty in a frock of white crepe and French lace. She was attended by Mrs. Marion Sundquist, who was becomingly gowned in a navy georgette dress. The groom was supported by Mr. William Mattson of Westeros.

The many friends of this popular young couple wish them much happiness.

NEWSPAPER MAN LOSES DEFAMATORY LABEL CASE

The adjourned sitting of the criminal sittings of the Supreme Court was held here Oct. 13th, before the Honourable Justice Lunnay when the case Rex vs. J. W. Johnstone was disposed of. Johnstone was charged with defamatory libel in that he published certain articles in The Alliance Times in October, 1932, reflecting on J. J. Maloney and the Ku Klux Klan. After Maloney had given evidence, His Honour summed up the case and fined defendant Johnstone the sum of $25.00 without costs. R. E. Jackson, Edmonton, was counsel for the prosecution, and C. M. Boyton, Castor, acted for the defendant.

ling. There was hope that this difficulty might be overcome in the near future.

A regular meeting of the City Council was held on October 10th, with all members present.

Aldermen Brown and Scott were appointed delegates to attend the meeting of the Community Welfare League on October 15th.

The offer of the Wetaskiwin U.F.A. Co-op. Association to purchase lots for $20 was accepted.

The offer from N. S. Linden for the purchase of lots for the sum of $15 was accepted.

The request of Dr. A. S. McColgan, M.O.H., for a third share of his expenses in attending the M.O.H. convention at Calgary was granted.

Dr. A. S. McColgan, as M.O.H., reported to the Council on certain quarantine cases and the general health of the city.

Building permits were granted to L. G. Kelley for a barn costing $300 and to R. A. Sorenson for a chicken house value $75.

Reports and correspondence received from C. W. Dingman, gas well engineer, Calgary, regarding the city gas well were received.

Alderman Poole was appointed Deputy Mayor for the last quarter of the year.

Accounts to the amount of $745.36 were passed for payment.

Ald. Enman, chairman of the Public Works, reported several sidewalks and concrete walks had been repaved with tar sand at a cost of slightly under $200. He also spoke about improving the Island light at the intersection of Pearce st. and the highway.

The application sent to the Provincial Public Works Department for permission to carry out $1500 for unemployment relief in raising the grade on streets was approved.

After passing three by-laws and considering relief cases and other matters the meeting adjourned.

WETASKIWIN H.S. WIN FROM RED DEER; ASP STARS

The first game in the Central Alberta high school league was played here Friday afternoon and the local boys succeeded in defeating the strong Red Deer aggregation by the score of 12 to 6. It was a hard battle from start to finish and proved to be the best exhibition the grid fans have witnessed for many a day. In the first quarter the Red Deer squad had the advantage. Burns caught the first forward of the game. A beautiful punt brought a score for Red Deer. Almsworth on a neat run chalked up the first touch, which was not converted.

The second quarter found Wetaskiwin still behind. Paton, with a beautiful catch from a forward pass, chalked up the only starting play.

The third quarter really marks the beginning of the fight. Burns caught another forward for Red Deer. Paton also caught another forward. The star play was a place kick b in favor of Red Deer. Both teams began to play real rugby and battle for the game.

The fourth quarter was marked by a series of line busses by Wetaskiwin such as have seldom been seen before. J. Irvine and S. Shaw took between them no less than a dozen busses in this quarter, gaining yards at every down. Wetaskiwin went wild and forced the desperate Red Deer squad down the field. A field goal tied the score.

Red Deer fumbled in its first scoring play and Asp recovered and chalked up the most spectacular play of the game. He failed to convert.

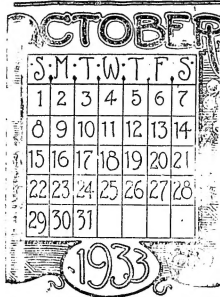

The game was rough throughout. Red Deer lost 40 yards by penalties and Wetaskiwin 20.

The Wetaskiwin team kept their promise to avenge their recent defeat. The line-up:

Red Deer—Quarter, V. Sinclair; halves, J. Sinclair and Farnell; ends, Gordon and Burns; fulls, Almsworth and Blades; snap, Slimits; infields, Carroll and Snell; middles, Martin and Lancaster.

Wetaskiwin—Quarter, Maxwell; halves, Shaw, J. Irvine, Farnell and Paton; snap, O. Williamson; infields, D. Williamson and H. Irvine; middles, Kelley and George; ends, Brown and Belle.

Referee—Dr. Turner of Red Deer and Mr. Sanderson of Wetaskiwin.

They Wouldn't
Dance With Her

Gwendra Hallett, lingering in the shadows on the verandah of the clubhouse on that July night, angrily cursed herself for having been such a fool as to come to the dance. It was the same at all the club dances. Men who view with each other to secure her as their partner at tennis left her to the role of wallflower when it was a question of dancing! She'd known that it would happen tonight. But she'd had a new dress, and it was a gorgeous night, and her mother would have been so surprised and upset if she hadn't come.

Gwendra was a fair-minded girl, and she grieved very hard, hiding out there on the verandah, listening to the music, so rhythmic and inviting, to be fair to the men who were neglecting her, but she couldn't help knowing that they were behaving candidly. Admitted that she was a poor dancer, that she wasn't pretty. Would it hurt them to dance once with her, considering how often they played tennis with her, how often her brilliant matches at the net won them matches? She couldn't help feeling that they were horribly lacking, not only in chivalry, but in kindness.

There were a few names sparsely sprinkled over her programme, but they were names of strangers guests of the members, introduced to her by the girls who had brought them. Not one of the men she knew best in the club, the regular members, had asked her to dance!

As she stood there in the shadows in her dark frock, she heard two men talking in a room, the lighted window of which was just behind her, and half-open.

It was the window of the club smokeroom. She recognized the voice of Bob Archard:

"Hang it all, Gwendra's our star turn at tennis. I know, but she can't dance! Why a chap should ask her—"

"I know she's an awful lump to drag around," said the other man, who, however, sounded a little ashamed of himself, "I don't know why she comes to the dances. She ought not to expect us to dance with her just because we happen to be playing tennis with her! The girl's got no sense."

"Anyway, I'm booked up all the evening with Sheila."

"So'm I, with Deline. I say, old man, what d'you think of my new girl?"

They lowered their voices.

It was then that Gwendra saw that she was not the only person on the verandah. Leaving over the balustrade stood a tall man who now turned, so she saw his face. She recognized him as Captain Lancing, who was staying with the Tates. She knew by his expression that he had heard every word that Bob Archard and Tony Graham had said, and that he was furious and disgusted.

He stared straight at her. She covered back, trembling and horrified! If she knew, by his expression, that he was disgusted by what he had heard, he would know by hers, that she was the girl of whom they'd been speaking!

He walked away along the verandah.

Now Gwendra was a practical girl. She faced the situation as coolly as she could. Were she to leave the club and go home her mother would be surprised and she shrank from telling her the truth. Mum knew that she, Gwendra, was one of the best players in the club, and she believed that on this account she would have a good time at the club dances. Mum had no conception at all of what modern young men were like—how base and selfish and hard to please. No. She couldn't go home. Then, she must make the best of things, and stay here.

She looked at her programme. There were six blanks before the scribbled initials of that pasty-faced youth whom Alice Herd had introduced to her. She always found that if other girls ever introduced men to her, they were always pasty-faced youths in their teens who danced abominably, and couldn't talk.

It would be a good thing, she thought, to go to the cloak-room and put in a quarter of an hour there. If any of the girls came in she'd pretend she was mending her dress. She was on the Ladies' Committee of the club and had been the first to suggest, at a committee meeting, that needles and cottons should be provided in the cloak-room.

She was crossing the lounge on her way to the cloak-room when she saw Captain Lancing with Lucy Tate. When he saw her, he turned quickly to Lucy and said something.

Lucy was bringing him over! Gwendra felt her face grow crimson! "Captain Lancing, Miss Hallett," said Lucy, with an ill grace, and went away.

"Please may I have some dances?" said Captain Lancing.

"Yes," she said.

"Thank you! What about the next one?"

She pretended to consult the programme. One had to keep up a sort of pretence, though, of course, he knew.

"Yes. I've got that free."

"And number eight and ten, and twelve? I do hope you can spare me twelve."

Number twelve was the supper dance!

Oh, this was awful! Gwendra made a gallant effort to be self-possessed. The situation was terribly humiliating, but the only thing she must remember was that this man was being wonderfully kind! He had, she saw, very kind, grey eyes. She kept her practically blank programme away from him.

Gwendra knew that there was only one thing to do, and that was, to accept this wonderful kindness, and let him victimize himself by dancing with her.

It would be a snub to the men who had treated her rudely! They wouldn't know that she knew, that he'd set her on the verandah and knew who she was.

A few moments later, she and her Knight Errant were dancing. Undoubtedly, she was a poor dancer. She knew it. She and her partner did not get on very well. Flushed and humiliated, she said:

"I'm afraid I'm not good at dancing, let's sit out!"

"Nonsense! It's I who am a poor partner, but we'll sit out, if you like."

He talked very interestingly about his life in India. He was home on leave, and was to rejoin his regiment early in September. His people were in the north of England.

Could Not Sleep at Night
Tired Out During the Day

Mrs. N. W. Lukowey, Oakburn, Man., writes:—"After an operation I was left in a very weak and run down condition. I could not sleep at night, and would be all tired out during the day. I tried all kinds of medicine, but none of them helped me, until I used Milburn's H. & N. Pills. I took two boxes and I am very thankful for the help they gave me. I would strongly advise all those being in a run down condition to give these Pills a thorough trial!"

For sale at all drug and general stores; put up only by The T. Milburn Co. Limited, Toronto, Ont.

He was staying with friends in Streating.

"You're with the Tates," she said. "Yes. They're old friends of my people."

He made no comments upon the Tates. Gwendra considered them unlikable people. Lucy was only too glad to partner her, Gwendra, in the ladies' doubles in the club tournament, but did she introduce men to her at the dances? Not she! She never would have introduced this man had he not asked her to do so.

Because she felt herself so grateful to this cheerful young man, she exerted herself to amuse and interest him. He seemed to find her congenial. They laughed a lot. She told him about the solicitor's office in which she worked, narrated amusing things that happened. She felt a thrill of bliss when Lucy passed with Bob, and they both glanced at her and Captain Lancing, who at the moment, was laughing heartily at something she had said. Lucy was frowning; Bob looked amazed.

Never in her experience—poor girl it hadn't been extensive—had Gwendra enjoyed a dance so much! Even the actual dancing proved, after the first venture, to be enjoyable, for her partner abandoned all idea of doing intricate steps, and did only simple steps that she could follow. Such "star performers" as Bob and Lance Mason and other members of the club were resentful if a girl couldn't do the very latest steps, and such girls as were favoured by them with invitations to dance had to practise quite a lot in order to prove worthy partners.

The super-dance was the greatest fun imaginable. Particularly as their table was close beside that at which Lucy, who looked decidedly sulky, was sitting with Tony Hall.

Lucy was fond of Tony and went everywhere with him, and he was supposed to be very much in love with her, but it was obvious that Lucy would have preferred the attentions of a handsome Army Captain to those of a rather weedy-looking youth who was a clerk in a bank and had very poor prospects.

Of course, Captain Lancing had already danced several times with Lucy, and Gwendra had seen her initials on his programme opposite the numbers of future dances, but no doubt she'd expected him to ask her for the super-dance.

They had a great many jokes, had Gwendra and her partner, but he could be serious at times. Looking round the supper-room, he said:

"Are these nearly all members of your club?"

"Nearly. There are about fifteen guests."

"A flourishing club! I should think is the standard of play here."

"I think it is. We win most of our matches with other clubs."

She didn't add that she was one of those to whose credit this was due. He said:

"I gather you're one of the stars!" Because she knew from whence he'd gathered the fact, she felt a little uncomfortable.

"Oh, I play an average game!"

"But that's not what I understood at all!"

She avoided his eye.

"Someone's been flattering me."

She changed the subject, and talked of something amusing, so that he laughed, and Lucy's expression grew still more sulky and envious.

After that, Gwendra endured torture at the hands—and feet—of the pasty-faced youth whom Alice Herd had introduced. She saw that Captain Lancing was dancing with Lucy. Lucy danced beautifully, yet—she didn't look half so smiling and pleased as he'd looked as he'd danced with her.

She was delighted when number fifteen came, and he hurried up to her. Out of pity for him, she suggested that they should sit out, and he said:

"Let's! It'll be cool on the verandah!"

She hadn't the happiest recollections of the verandah, but she followed him out. When they were sitting in two wicker chairs, and he'd lit her cigarette and his own, he said rather abruptly:

"You know, I don't like this club of yours?"

"Don't you?" She felt her color rising. "Why? What have you against it?"

"I don't care for the spirit of it."

"How is that?"

She thought: "I must keep cool; though I really can't see where this is leading!"

He was silent for a moment. In the dim light she couldn't see his face clearly, but she guessed that it looked grim.

"Every club has its spirit," he said, and his voice sounded contemptuous. "I know that. I've run clubs. It strikes me there's a rotten cadish spirit here!"

"Does it?" she murmured.

"Yes. Tonight, I happened to overhear two young men talking about a girl. Well, it made me furious! Of course, you'll know the girl they mean! She's evidently a good player, and they're all keen enough to play with her, but—they don't ask her to dance!"

Gwendra's breath was taken away! Why—why, what an astounding thing that he should speak of this to her! What did he expect her to say!

She said nothing. She simply couldn't think of a word.

"I'd like to have seen the girl," he was saying, "so that I could judge for myself. But of course, she's gone home. I heard someone say so. I don't wonder, poor thing. Tell me, Miss Hallett, is this girl Gwendra—"

I didn't hear her other name—is she so very unattractive?"

Gwendra gasped.

"Of course," he went on, "you're so kind that I expect you won't tell me the truth about her!"

She laughed — the oddest sound! She knew, of course, that he didn't know who she was! He had not seen her on the verandah!

"Why are you laughing?" he asked, surprised, "I happen to have a sense of humor! But I don't see—"

"You'll see in a minute! You didn't hear Gwendra's other name, did you?"

"Not. Why did you ask?"

"Because her other name happens to be Hallett."

She heard the wicker chair creak under a convulsive movement of his. His face was turned to her. She'd have given a lot to be able to see it clearly!

"What — what on earth do you mean?"

"I'm Gwendra Hallett."

"Impossible!" he gasped.

"But I am!"

"I can't believe it! I — Good heavens!"

He was deeply distressed and agitated. Gwendra felt very sorry for him. Gently she said:

"Please don't be upset! Don't you see — you've not done anything wrong! Quite the other way round! Yes—"

"How could I ever dream that you were Gwendra?" he cried.

It was as if he was stroking her pride the right way. With every word he said! Of course he'd not known she was Gwendra! She'd seen that, as soon as he'd talked about overhearing what those men had said! He'd been so angry and disgusted, out here, after he'd overheard them, that he'd been too preoccupied to see her. And the shadows had hidden her.

"Good heavens!" he was saying. "Why, I can't get over this! I — simply don't know what to say!"

She laughed. Life was all right up and set to music. She knew what to say!

"I thought you'd seen me, out here on the verandah, when those men were talking. I thought you were the kindest man in all the world, to ask a girl to dance when no one else would ask! Oh, you don't know how I admired you!"

"I heard someone say that Gwendra had gone home."

"I hadn't!"

There was a silence for a moment. Then he said:

"Listen, please. As soon as I came into the room tonight with Lucy, I saw a girl I — liked the look of."

LESSONS IN ECONOMICS

(By R. J. Deachman)

I have, from a friend in the West, a pair of shoes made out of binder twine and a very interesting letter from the man who made them.

In a sentence the story is this: The products the farmer sells are so low in price and the products which he buys relatively so high in price that the farmer finds it necessary to fall back upon his own resources and substitute something else for the things which were used in happier days.

In many cases, he has pulled the engine out of his automobile, fixed it up in other ways, dabbled in a Bennett or Depression Bug, and utilizes it as his forerunners did the old demerits before the automobile annihilated space and added comfort to life.

In the same way his ingenious spirit is working out other remedies and the binder twine shoes are an illustration. There is a tragic tone in one part of his letter. He says:

"I had a note yesterday from a farmer in this province asking me to let him know how binder twine shoes were made as the family was bare-footed and prospects were no better for the coming winter. I am indeed sorry I cannot explain it to him. It is too complicated. If he were here I could show him."

Such is the dire effect of the present madness of the world and the late World Conference is a definite indication that we are not yet ready to see a different road.

Here is another extract from my friend's letter:

"Western conditions have changed. For instance, last year Nature provided us with wild fruit, and sugar for canning was to be had for $6.25 per cwt. This year we also had the fruit but as sugar is $9.00 per cwt. we cannot buy it. We are making our own sugar today from the new crop of sugar beets of which we have about half an acre, so we can get some of the later berries. We can easily make $3.00 worth of sugar in a day, so that pays better than farming. Of course I never have been on relief and do not believe in it. As we literally live in the world's greatest pantry, relief should be out of the question."

"What a world! Sugar in Cuba so cheap that it does not pay to produce it. In a world where science and invention should have brought the Cuban product to the doors of every Canadian at the lowest price, the cost of sugar is so high that it pays a farmer in the province of Saskatchewan to make sugar at home without machinery, by the crudest possible process, and to weave from binder twine the shoes he needs for his suffering family. What a waste of effort! But rendered necessary by the value of ignorance in those who reign over us. And the unconquered spirit of the man! In the shoes was a little note:

"Depression Shoes 1933."

Don't you often tire of attending a series of luncheons at which each hostess tries to outdo the previous one in the richness and elaborateness of her food? I do, and recently went to a party prepared to be overfed and utterly bored. However, the hostess must have felt as I did for she surprised us all by having—what do you suppose?—baked beans! I guess all of us were delighted and we showed our appreciation by actually "gorging."

The Spread

The table was spread with a red and white checked cloth and a red and white checked napkin lay at each place. There was no centerpiece save a big brown earthenware pot of beans flanked on one side by a dish of catsup and on the other by one of pickles.

A maid brought in a plate of hot Boston brown bread and the ten in an old-fashioned silver tea-pot.

Sliced tomatoes were served as the necessary vegetable and the dessert was apple sauce and gingerbread.

The luncheon was unique and has caused all the prospective hostesses in that set to don thinking caps for original ideas for their parties. I knew that you would be interested, too, and probably want to give a "bean party" for your friends, so I'm giving you the needed recipes. You already have my gingerbread but here are the others in quantities for six persons:

RECIPES

Boston Brown Bread

- 1 egg
- 1 cup of sour milk
- 1 heaping teaspoonful of soda dissolved in
- 1 tablespoonful of boiling water
- 1 cup of molasses
- 1 cup of yellow corn meal
- 1 cup of rye flour
- 1 cup of wheat flour
- 1 teaspoonful of salt

Beat egg; add milk; add dissolved soda to molasses and beat until foamy; add to egg and milk; sift in the dry ingredients. (Raisins may be added if desired. Flour about half a cupful and mix with the batter.) Put into greased mold and cover with light. Steam for three hours. Let cool before removing from mold.

I like my bread crusty; so after it is done I remove it from the mold and place it in a moderate oven for about five or ten minutes.

Baked Beans

Soak overnight one pound of navy beans. Then cook over a low fire until the beans can be mashed with a fork. Put a pinch of baking soda into them before removing from fire. Pour into casserole; add salt and pepper to taste and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of mustard; add four tablespoonfuls of molasses and if the mixture does not seem moist enough or if your casserole is not quite full, add more water. Slice half a pound of salt pork and place on top of the beans. Cover and cook for two hours in a very slow oven. (Copyright).

CONTRAST IS MARKED

A motorist who has been touring in the British Isles writes to a Canadian newspaper commenting on the courtesy exhibited by all drivers there in contrast to the "I'm in a hurry—look out for yourself" attitude, which unfortunately is so frequently encountered on this side of the Atlantic.

There, he says, the driver ahead in a line of traffic signals whether or not it is wise to pass; indicates his every intention, and generally assists others on the road by making clear, as far as possible, what conditions exist.

Such courtesy as this might easily result in a great diminution in the number of traffic accidents. Occasionally, one encounters a similar spirit in Canada, but all too infrequently.

A friendly and polite attitude on the part of motorists could be one of the most valuable factors in reducing the appalling number of automobile accidents in this country each year.—Guelph Mercury.

They Wouldn't Dance With Her

I asked Lucy who you were. She said: "That's Miss Hallett. She's one of our best players." Well, you disappeared. When I saw you again, I was with Lucy, and I got her to introduce me. How could I have any idea that you were the Gwendra they had been talking about?

The significance of that question was balm to Gwendra!

"I've had the happiest evening dancing with you, talking to you! I can't say how sorry I am for having dropped that brick just now!"

"But it's the kind of a brick a girl loves to have dropped." You needn't ever apologise for dropping that kind of a brick!"

He joined in her laughter, and went on: "The Tates have asked me to stay on with them for another week. I said I might not be able to do so, but I find now that I shall."

"Streetsing isn't a bad suburb," remarked Gwendra sedately. "It's nice to be so near London."

A silence can be very expressive. Something in Captain Lancing's expression suggested that if he'd dared he'd have said London was not what he would find it nice to be near!

"Will you," he said, "ask me here to play tennis, and let me be your partner?"

"I will!" said Gwendra.

"What about tomorrow afternoon?"

Tomorrow was Sunday. All the club would be here, and would see them playing together!

"That will do very well," said Gwendra.

They played wonderful tennis together! His forehand drive and Gwendra's brilliant volleying at the net won them their set against the club's best pair.

Every evening of the following week Roger Lancing played with Gwendra, and with no one else. The club wondered! They'd have wondered still more had they known that every evening he took Gwendra dancing or sat talking to her on her mother's veranda. They didn't know, because Gwendra didn't tell them, and neither did Lucy Tate.

The club sat up and rubbed its eyes when it was announced that Captain Lancing and Gwendra Hallett were engaged!

Gwendra might have rejoiced at her triumph, but—people who are in love with, and loved by, someone worth loving, don't bother their heads about petty things like that! Why should they? The most precious and lovely thing in the world is theirs, and that is all that matters!

the west there are all sorts and conditions of men.

Last week one of the chaps in Innisfail created considerable interest. He was a fire eater, circusman. He had two small torches, he would place a lighted one in his mouth and then breathe out flames. He would then put a torch in his mouth and put out the flame, then light the second torch from his breath. Hot stuff.

This chap could also stick a pin through his throat and withdraw it and no blood would come. He broke up a razor blade into small pieces and ate the pieces. This latter stunt, if it could be used by men generally, would solve a problem which has bothered a lot of us for years. Just what to do with our old razor blades. This man disposed of his so easily that we feel almost like suggesting to our friends to try eating them.

Some of those we have had to use at times have made us mad enough to eat the manufacturer of the particular blade. — Innisfail Province.

SECURE MUCH DATA

"Aurora borealis flashing directly overhead at Port Rae never came lower to the earth's surface than 50 miles distance during their observations. Dr. J. M. Stagg, leader of the party of British scientists who have spent the last 13 months at Port Rae, North West Territories, studying northern weather conditions, made this statement.

Until the large volume of data gathered during the 13-month stay in the north had been studied it was impossible to state the result of their observations. Dr. Stagg said. Some 18 months would be required before the data could be placed in publishable form.

GERMANS LIMIT SUNDAY MEAL

A well-disciplined German public has limited its Sunday dinner to one "hot pot" without trimmings, soup, dessert and fruit, costing no more than 50 pfennings (about 17 cents).

The gastronomic restrictions were in accordance with a government injunction putting each German on his honor to limit his eating and turn over the balance of what the usual Sunday dinner would have cost to the winter relief fund.

WHAT TO DO FOR BURNS

(By Dr. William J. Scroles)

Hebra classifies burns in three degrees, according to the extent of the lesion. A first degree burn is one in which there is merely a simple inflammatory reaction of the skin. A second degree burn is one accompanied by the formation of blisters. A third degree burn is one which leads to necrosis and sloughing of the affected area.

The classification, of course, takes into account only the depth of the burn. Equally important, however, is the extent of the burned area. It is a generally accepted fact that if two-thirds of the body surface has been burned the victim cannot possibly recover. This, because the burned area fails to perform its part in the process of elimination of poisons from the body. We can much longer survive a locking of the kidneys and bowels than of the skin. The latter eliminates more poison than the two former combined.

The extensive employment of the so-called paraffin treatment during the war has led to its use in private practice since that time. The method is applicable principally to burns of the first and second degrees. The area is washed with an antiseptic solution (Chloramin-T) then dried with gauze. The burn is then painted with paraffin which has been melted and allowed to cool down to about 50°C. The resultant layer of paraffin is covered with a thin pad of cotton and the entire dressing held in place with a gauze bandage. Each day the dressing is removed, the burned area carefully cleaned, dead tissue removed, and a new dressing applied.

First Degree Burns
The simplest treatment of a first degree burn is dusting of the surface with a dry powder, such as bismuth or burnt alum. My favorite, however, has for twenty years been Picric acid (1% solution). It almost instantly relieves the pain, rapidly reduces the inflammation, and materially prevents destruction of burned tissues. The only objection to its use is its odor.

During the past three or four years, we have been looking at the debit side of the ledger—thinking gloomy thoughts, wearing long faces, fearing prosperity would never return. We have forgotten the ledger has a credit side. We have forgotten that not all the world is in darkness at the same time—that one half is always flooded with sunshine.

We have been remembering only the man who is in distress. We have forgotten the four or five times as many men who are still enjoying prosperity and happiness. It is the happy man who has become the "forgotten" man.

Let us remember the distressed, of course. But let us also remember the thousands who are still fortunately placed and so keep our courage up until the only forgotten things are gloom and depression.—Alliance Times.

FARM LABOUR AND WAGES

The average wages paid to farm helpers in Canada for the year 1932 again showed a considerable decrease as compared with the previous year.

The cost of farm labour reached its highest point in 1929. In the next two years there was a rapid drop so that the average of yearly wages, including board for male help, in 1932 was nearly 25 per cent less than in 1929. From 1923 to 1929 no very wide fluctuations occurred. In 1930, 1931, and 1932 continuous marked reductions were registered in the average value of yearly wages and board, following the downward trend of the prices of farm produce.

COMMUNICATION

[We do not necessarily endorse the statements advanced by this or any other correspondent under this heading.—Ed.]

To The Editor, Wetaskiwin Times.

Dear Sir:

MR. BENNETT IN THE WEST

Editor Milster Bennett's recent speeches in the West reveals the fact that he is wholeheartedly for the policy of "Laissez Faire," the literal meaning of which is "Let it alone." It is a policy of "Every man for himself and devil take the hindmost." Unfortunately, however, Mr. Bennett was speaking to the hindmost, for he had to admit that there were evidences of improved economic conditions in the East and in other countries such benefits were not being enjoyed in the West.

It was plain that Mr. Bennett was very conscious that he spoke from the superior knowledge of one who had just completed a post-graduate course in highest finance. He did not miss an opportunity of telling his audience that he had hob-nobbed with the financial emperors of the earth in London. Being a man of considerable wealth himself, he could heartily sympathize with those who were possessed of government securities which were purchased with cheap dollars and whose value was being paid in dollars that are quite dear. But while Mr. Bennett seems to have an intimate knowledge of the best practices in the realm of high finance, he betrayed a lamentable ignorance with regard to the more mundane practices of ordinary commerce. This he demonstrated when dealing with the wheat problem.

In dealing with that problem before western audiences, the Prime Minister was most disappointing. He declared that it was a simple matter, all that had to be done was to reduce the "inventory" as is done in ordinary commerce. He seems to have entirely missed the point that usually businessmen are able to reduce inventories at not less than cost, even when under financial stress; while, on the other hand, wheat producers have been forced to sell all their wheat below cost for the past three years.

Again, he missed the points that businessmen set their own limit on the sacrifices they would make, and that they can count on reduction in prices stimulating demand. Ignoring these points, Mr. Bennett innocently informed his hearers that the low price of wheat has affected the demand very little, if at all.

Mr. Bennett did mention a possible corrective for the wheat situation, reduction of acreage 15%, but he gave no hint as to how this very difficult adjustment is to be made without imposing unnatural and mandatory methods. He also took a great deal of credit to himself for securing at the World Wheat Conference a quota of 35% of total exportable wheat—200,000,000 bushels—but he rather avoided the fact that we have twice that quantity in sight to dispose of.

No concrete proposal was made with regard to the disposal of Canada's surplus, the largest in the world, such as converting it into industrial alcohol and providing that a practical percentage be used in all gasoline sold, in the same manner as England is doing today, for economic reasons. If this wheat surplus was so disposed of, or in some other equally economic manner, the World Wheat Conference might be called together again and asked to make all transactions in wheat, below the cost of production, illegal. This however, is too much to hope for from Mr. Bennett after the Grain Futures Report which was prepared by the financially biased Sir Josiah Stamp, for such action would automatically do away with the Exchange system of marketing from which method finance profits largely from short term loans, perfectly secured, and thereby at all times controls not only the product but the producers thereof.

Such regulation would have the effect of leaving with the individual producers all surplus wheat; but in that position it could not become an international economic burden, but rather a small individual problem to be dealt with individually. It would automatically control acreage! Under such an arrangement provision could be made so that each producer could contract for not less than fifty per cent of his normal production with the balance to be held against an uninterfered with demand, arising out of actual consumer need. Thus the production of wheat could be placed on the same sound basis—regulation of the element of cost in the equation of value—as other commercial undertakings. It would then be proper to advise the wheat producer to reduce his inventory when he carried too much wheat.

However, this is not in the book, and Mr. Bennett being a lawyer—a very brilliant one—has been brought up on precedent. With him, therefore, where there is no precedent there is little likelihood of action.

HAULTAIN U.F.A. LOCAL

Haultain U.F.A. opened the winter season in social events when the senior branch challenged the junior branch to debate the following resolution on Wednesday, Oct. 11th: "Resolved that the Junior U.F.A. has not proved itself worth while." The Juniors obtained the unanimous decision of the judges, so now the seniors have to admit the Juniors are an up and coming bunch. Just before the decision of the judges was announced, a dime collection was taken up, the collection to go to the treasury of the winning side. Consequently the Juniors were doubly satisfied with the result of the debate and were in such good humor that they indulged in a 15-minute community singing before supper was served.

THRESHING OUT WEST

Gus was hired to run both ends. Gee, how he sure goes and tends. Till he's just as black as coal, And as stiff as a tamarac pole.

One grain hauler, Walter Krause. Pelt so tired and so drowsy. Then when he awoke and reared. His shimmels both had disappeared.

And another grain did haul. It was a deer, Mr. Paul; He was always on his feet. For they called him "Old Man Pete."

Nels with a fine old team. Made a picture to be seen; Always early and on time. 'Way before the sun did shine.

The field pitchers, Bill and Fred. Worked so hard, they were often red; Their shoulders like a roof a-sagging. They came evening home a-dragging.

Then there came the two old bays. The steady teamster, Adolf Hays; Tom a-dipping and a-frothing. Dick a-snooring and a-coughing.

Mr. Somerfeld, so brave. Made a face oh, so grave. When he turned by the engine side He upset, and made a slide.

Herman, with the smallest team. Went along with the machine; Always talking, teasing cooks. You can tell by his looks.

Dan, he is so tall and slim. Always quiet, neat and trim; Either he's tired, or he is shy. Glancing at the cooks on the fly.

Ewold comes in with a grin. Yes, with a dimple in his chin; He thinks he is the best of all. For the girls for him did fall.

Albert at his home did go. For his back did ache, and so. We thought he was sick, you know. But 'twas only lumbago.

Gus, he had old Frank and Nell. Oh, he seemed to look so well; Round the corner he'd be sliding. Like a bulky steer a-riding.

Visitors were often seen. By our plucky old machine; Girls worked hard, men got wet. But they came again, you bet.

The cooks were Kay and May. Always ready, neat and gay; Meat, cake, pie and dumplings, too. That's what they did make, the two.

Then, the last day of all, Mr. Henke came to call. With a jug and bottle of gin. Gee, how they all did grin.

That's the way you outwest, thresh. Run the engine without gas; Next, we're up to have a rest. The whole bunch out in the west.

WEEKLY STOCK MARKET REPORT

The following is a report of the Edmonton Stock Yards for the week Receipts: Cattle 660; Calves 387; Hogs 585; Sheep 465.

There is no material improvement in the quality of the offerings as the bulk of receipts still consist of mostly common kinds. In consequence the market generally is inclined to be on the slow order, and salesmen at times were finding it difficult to make clearances. Sales so far this week indicate no change in prices as values generally remain about steady and unchanged.

Field Secretary for Temperance in Nova Scotia.

The local supporters of the Alberta Prohibition Association held a rally on Friday night at the United Church, when Rev. Dr. Grant, Field Worker of Nova Scotia addressed the meeting.

The Dr. spoke very pleasantly and out of wide experience drew many lessons concerning the evils that appertain to the increasing use of alcoholic beverages. There was much to discourage the temperance workers, especially the upathy of those who had heretofore been workers. The invidious devil was spreading and the public did not seem to awake to the fact. At any rate the attendance at meetings was small.

WETASKIWIN H.S. RUGBY

(By Stanley Barnett)

The remarkable victory of the Wetaskiwin High School rugby squad over Red Deer on Friday brings to the minds of all the short but spectacular history of rugby in the High School. It was begun in 1930 by Mr. McCullough and continued by him in the next season. Mr. Farewell managed the team in 1932 and Mr. Colpitts is now in charge. It was in 1932 that the team established the unique record of not losing a game, and won the Central Alberta championship. It is for this laurel that the Wetaskiwin team is now striving.

The game, although open to all, attracts the boys of the upper school and thus it is that the majority of the players are in Grade XII. The squad is practically self-supporting, gate receipts furnish the required finances.

The average weight of the players is 155 lbs, and the average age is 17. Billy Maxwell and Bob Farnham as quarters, direct the team in action. Stanley Shaw and Jim Irvine, who plunged their way to a glorious success on Friday are our star halves. Teddy Asp and Roger Paton have this year shared most of our forwards, although much is expected of Bert Brown in the near future. Our infallible place kicker, Teddy Asp, hero of Friday's game, is one of our most dependable players. Osborne Williamson, who has never caused a fumble by a poor snap, has been a major factor in the success of fake plays.

It is claimed that the game is too rough (witness A. MacArthur's broken shoulder, S. Sorenson's and D. Williamson's broken noses and W. Maxwell's sprained ankle, and innumerable bruises to all). But it is a game to develop men, the supreme test of the athlete, for rugby requires not only strength, but speed, endurance, perfect weight and judgment, and skill in handling the ball. It is a game that will last as long as there are lusty boys and the fighting spirit in our school.

Two games have already been played this year. The first an exhibition game at Red Deer, which the boys lost; the second, a league game at the Exhibition Grounds. It was a desperate, rough and thrilling battle, and Red Deer went down to defeat. Other equally rough games are to come, many a desperate field must be won ere we get the championship. But we must win "Fortes fortuna adjuvat."

STUDENTS' EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

(Submitted by the Principal)

The students of Wetaskiwin High School have elected from their body an Executive Council which will collaborate with the Principal in the direction and management of all extra-curricular activities of the school, such as athletics, dramatics, social activities and debating. This body will also function as a disciplining committee in the sphere of extra-curricular activities.

This movement had its inception in and is a result of a growing school spirit and sense of student responsibility which the Principal is pleased to encourage.

It was the pleasure of the student body to elect Harry Irvine as president of their Executive Council.

HON. H. H. STEVENS TO ADDRESS BOARD OF TRADE LUNCHEON

A general meeting of the Board will be held in the Driard Hotel, on Tuesday, Oct. 24th, at 6:15 p.m. The Board has been fortunate in securing the Hon. H. H. Stevens, M.P., Minister of Trade and Commerce, to address the meeting. It is urgently hoped that you will make an effort to be present and bring anyone with you who you think may be interested in hearing the Minister.

In answer to the petition of the board of trade that the Castor-Coronation highway be gravelled this year, Hon. O. L. McPherson, minister of public works, stated that financial conditions did not warrant the expenditure at this time. He agreed that it was desirable to continue the development of such roads as early as possible, but that under the present situation we must carry on the best way possible.—Coronation Review.

Canadian Garden Service

(By Gordon Lindsay Smith)

Plant Bulbs Now

From now until the ground freezes hard is the proper time to plant tulips, hyacinths and other spring flowering bulbs. For the labor and expense involved no other kind of gardening pays such dividends in complete satisfaction. There is no cultivation, no bothersome spraying, no attention whatever, and yet if first size, healthy bulbs are secured from a reliable seedman, flowers of any color desired are guaranteed. An hour some Saturday afternoon or early evening will see enough planted not only to make a splendid show outside but to give flowering plants from Christmas through most of the winter. It is essential to get big, heavy bulbs, the kind that the Dutch Government grades No. 1, as the others may not have grown enough to flower a hundred per cent the first season or at any rate the blooms will not be nearly so large as those produced by bulbs of the first quality.

Outdoor Bloom

Tulips, Hyacinths and Daffodils are splendid things to plant along the edge of shrubbery, and in beds in front of the house. Coming up before the last snow has departed and blooming from late April until June, they get all the sunshine they need before the shrubs are out in full foliage. With the tulips one is advised to plant in fair sized clumps, at least six of one variety, and to use some of the four main types, the single early kind, and the later, taller and larger, Darwins, Breeders or Cottage tulips. These should be planted fairly deep, at least six or eight inches, the deeper planting to be done in the lighter soil, and better still from ten to fourteen inches, with the larger and later types. Along the front of borders and scattered through the lawn can be planted crocuses and snowdrops. These are merely planted an inch or so below the surface and they will come so early that the first grass cutting will not interfere.

For Winter Bloom

All these blooms can also be planted inside, and their bright yellows, vivid reds, and the beautiful blending bronze shades will do much to shorten the long days of January and February. For this sort of bloom one is advised to select the early tulips. Most varieties suitable for forcing are specially marked in the seedsmen's full catalogues. Hyacinths, and daffodils, of course make excellent winter flowers and in addition to these and several others there is the Narcissus, the easiest of all flowers to grow indoors. With the latter no special treatment is required. The bulbs are planted in fibre, or pebbles or earth, set away in the coldest part of the cellar for a few weeks then brought out to full heat and sunshine, five to six weeks after planting they are in bloom, and it is possible by buying a few dozen of these bulbs every month, to have continuous flowers from the first of December until April. With the other bulbs, the tulips, daffodils, hyacinths, etc., it is essential after the bulbs are planted to place in a cold, dark place for four to eight weeks. A place where the temperature is about 45 degrees is ideal, but they may be handled in the ordinary darkened fruit cellar. Special bulb fibre, which is clean, cheap and can be used over and over again is the most convenient material to use. The bulbs are planted so that only the tips are showing, in bowls or pots, watered well and set in the dark cellar. When the pots are filled with roots and the stems have grown about an inch, they are brought out to the light and heat, though if other flowers are still blooming they may be held back a week or so, thus having flowers continuously. Once these bulbs are out in flower, and this applies to all house plants, they should be kept as cool as possible, without freezing, especially at night and the blossoms will last much longer.

Fall Planting

Late fall is just as important a season for planning a good many things as the spring. Roses, shrubbery, climbers, ornamental and fruit trees as well as many of the perennials may be set out at this time. In some districts fall planting is to be favored over the other because then there is plenty of moisture in the ground and the plant gets established before the drying winds of late spring and the heat of summer comes along. In this and all planting, of course, it is essential to spread out roots, cover with fine soil firmly and water well. With trees of any size it will be necessary to provide some support in the form of a stout wooden or iron stake. Newly set out plants should receive special winter protection in the form of a light mulch of leaves or straw. It is well to extend this protection to established perennials also. If the tops are not diseased they should be left to collect snow, which is nature's own winter blanket.

TRYING SOMETHING NEW

Two Italians may attempt to cross the Atlantic in a barrel-like craft propelled solely by rolling. They are Captain M. Camilli and his mechanic, Signor Rametta. The vessel, called a "Gyroboat," is a kind of buoy in the shape of a barrel with a revolving cable which gives it its speed. It is completely closed and will hold several people. According to word from Palermo the inventors completed their first trial by crossing the Straits of Messina in less than an hour. They made their "ship" roll simply by their own movements inside the barrel. The inventors intend to propel their vessel down the coast to Catania and there to stay while they perfect it. They claim they will be able to cross the Atlantic in it at stupendous speed.

WHAT CANADA HAS DONE

The following are a few facts about Canada that can be verified by existing historical records: Canada built and sent the first steamboat across the Atlantic. Canada built and demonstrated the first compound steam engine in the history of the world. The effects of this invention was the doom of the sailing ship as a factor in ocean commerce.

Canada built and demonstrated the first submarine telegraph in the history of the world.

Canada built and demonstrated the first railway sleeping cars.

Canada originated the idea of making paper from wood pulp.

Canada demonstrated the first practical electric railway in the history of the world.

Canada originated the idea of electric heating.

Canada pioneered in the field of electro-chemistry with the discovery of calcium carbide by Tom Williams of Hamilton.

Canada originated the idea of Standard Time, which has since been adopted by every civilized country in the world.

Canada originated the idea of the panoramic camera.

Canada originated Marquis and other more recent wheats which have built up the commerce of the west, both in Canada and the United States.

Canada first isolated helium in commercial quantities.

The idea of the telephone originated in Canada and the first long distance trials of the instrument were made between Paris and Brantford.

Canada gave to the world the idea of the all-electric radio.

Insulin is of too recent date to require more than mention in this list.

We simply can't understand the set-up of some people, remarks the Durham Chronicle, which goes on and tells of an old lady out in Saskatchewan, 76 years of age, who walked 70 miles from Preeceville to Yorkton in the hope that she could get a pension. Her two sons didn't want her any more, she said, and she was penniless. Although a resident of Canada since 1913 she had never become naturalized, and was therefore not entitled to government assistance. With the Chronicle we join in asking, but what of the two boys. What can be done with them? Any man who will allow his mother to wander, providing he is able to supply it is not deserving of any consideration in a court

Ask for Kellogg's Corn Flakes by name. Kellogg's have been the standard of quality for more than 25 years—the finest value in Corn Flakes. . . Every red-and-green package guaranteed by W. K. Kellogg. of law. No leniency should be shown, and in this Saskatchewan case it is to be hoped the government will make every effort to force these sons to support their mother. Ontario laws are very plain on this, but at that there are too many who will allow the old folks to forage for themselves. Saskatchewan should put more teeth in its law.—Enterprise Bulletin.

Reports are that several head of cattle in this district have died from blackleg the past few days. This disease, we understand, is quite prevalent in Alberta at the present time and is depleting the herds all over the province. In conversation with a farmer north of town on Tuesday, we were informed that the only way to combat this disease among cattle is to vaccinate. No other remedy seems to be any good.
